

Dual Citizenship

Republic Act No. 9225, otherwise known as the Citizenship Retention and Re-acquisition Act of 2003 (more popularly known as the Dual Citizenship Law), declares that natural-born citizens of the Philippines who acquired foreign citizenship through naturalization shall be deemed not to have lost their Philippine citizenship.

Only natural-born citizens of the Philippines who have become citizens of another country by reason of naturalization may retain or re-acquire their Philippine citizenship under this Act.

Former natural-born Filipinos who have become naturalized citizens of another country can retain/reacquire their Philippine citizenship by taking an oath of allegiance to the Republic of the Philippines before a Philippine Consular Officer. Upon retaining/reacquiring their Philippine citizenship, they shall enjoy full civil, economic and political rights as Filipinos.

Under the principle of derivative citizenship, unmarried children below eighteen (18) years of age, whether legitimate, illegitimate, or adopted, of former Filipino parents who retained/reacquired their Philippine citizenship under this law, may also be deemed Filipino citizens, if they are included in the parent's application for retention/reacquisition of Philippine citizenship.

Dual Citizenship acquired by birth – A child born in the United States on or after 17 January 1973 when either or both parent/s was still a Filipino citizen is considered to be a dual citizen from birth. Such children should have their births reported to the Philippine Embassy/Consulate General having jurisdiction over the place of birth to be reported as a Filipino citizen. Please see requirements for Report of Birth.
